Who can do what

Every action in workPulse, who may take it, and where

This table is generated by reading the application's own permission rules. If a row here disagrees with something you were told, this row is right — and the guide that disagrees needs correcting.

Two distinctions do most of the work. Seeing something and changing it are different permissions, so each row says which it is. And a manager is not a department head: a manager runs the work, while a department head defines what the work is. That line is deliberate — if a manager could rewrite their own team's obligations, the record would be worth much less to an auditor, and an obligation a team kept failing could quietly disappear.

THE ROLES

management roles: Admin, Manager, Dept head, Exec, Exec (restricted) governance roles: Admin, Dept head

Generated from apps/api/src/trpc/trpc.service.ts. 130 actions in all; the plumbing ones are left out.

“Anyone signed in” still means what each person is allowed to see: your own tasks are yours, not everybody's. The role gate is the outer door, not the only one — a named approver, a reviewer who did not do the work, and a procedure nobody approved alone are all checked separately, and none of them appears in this table.
